1. The IMX Study Programme

The International Management Double Degree (IMX) undergraduate study programme leading to the academic qualification of Bachelor of Science in International Management and a corresponding degree from the chosen partner university is designed to qualify graduates for international management, project management and expert positions in companies in all branches of industry and non-profit-making organisations. The IMX programme also prepares students for a programme of study leading to a master's degree.

Because of the targeted professional occupations, or future study options, the qualification of the IMX students focuses on three main objectives, described in detail below:

- Professional qualification of very good high-school graduates by means of an international generalist and practice-oriented education in business administration, with equal emphasis placed on the development of personality ( “employability”),
- Encouragement to take part in extra-curricular student activities and social commitment ( “democratic citizenship”),
- Acquisition of skills required to carry out academic work independently ( “skills for academic work”).

Employability is the central conceptual focus of the IMX study programme. The aim is to train managers and experts with a global perspective, who are able to perform successfully in companies and organisations with international operations. Graduates of the IMX programme should therefore have developed skills in two fields:

- Professional competence: generalist, international, and practice-oriented.
- Soft skills (methodical, social, personal competence) in the fields of communication, structured problem solving, focus on achievement, organisation and management, teamwork, emotional and intercultural competence/ethical conduct.

The contents of the IMX study programme, especially in the first three years, are of a generalist nature, in order to enable extensive treatment of the most important aspects of business studies (see Curriculum & Syllabus Handbook and Agreed Module Structure). In the fourth year, in-depth study of special areas, functions, or industries is possible in order to prepare for a specific professional preference which may already have been formed at this stage. These professional skills are acquired in the “2 + 2 Model”, a two-year period abroad, the work experience placement abroad, classes in the language of the country of the host university, work in multinational groups, and intensive learning of the language and culture of the host country in an international context (international).

The obligatory work experience in both the home and the host country (under certain conditions also in a third country) provide students with early insight into the world of work in two cultural zones and the opportunity to put their theoretical knowledge and soft skills to the test, thus deepening their understanding. In addition, the professors in the IMX programme have many years of professional experience, and maintain close contacts to industry. Guest lecturers from the world of business, projects, case studies, and the opportunity to carry out work for the graduation thesis in collaboration with companies are a further component of the training for the real world provided by the IMX programme (practice-oriented).

IMX also works closely with globally active companies. This is supported both by the ESB corporate support association, VIMA, and by the ESB Advisory Board. These two organisations are used intensively by IMX in order to keep in touch with corporate requirements with regard to internationality and practical focus.

In addition to academically well-founded professional competences, graduates of the IMX programme should also have acquired a wide range of soft skills required for successful operation in international management or expert positions in all branches of industry and non-profit-making organisations. These important soft skills are addressed in particular in the Managerial Skills modules anchored in the curriculum in both halves of the degree programme.

The soft skills include written and spoken communication skills in German, English and the language of the host country. This is supported by the 2 +2 Model and intensive language teaching in the first half of the study programme, and after changing the study location before the fifth semester. Graduates should also be able to present themselves and behave in a manner appropriate to the situation. These presentation skills are promoted by practice on many occasions during studies and the obligatory work experience period of at least two semesters.

The field of structured problem solving comprises the identification and definition of complex problems and breaking them down and working through them systematically. Specific classroom units are dedicated to imparting this competence. Good analytical skills and sound numeracy are also required to be successful in many business professions. An understanding of supporting information technologies (e.g. big data, data mining) as well as the statistical methods is necessary. The IMX programme offers core and elective modules to provide a range of support for the acquisition of these skills.

The desired student focus on achievement requires, in addition to a high level of willingness to learn, a clear dedication to achievement and the ability to work under pressure. Graduates should also be able to meet deadlines and achieve set targets. This requires the development of active skills in self-management and management of others as well as situative adaptability. The demanding curriculum and the usually very challenging work experience semesters support the development of these skills. Two years spent studying in the context of another country and culture necessarily help to develop skills in self-management and the management of others (organisation and management).

BSc International Management Double Degree

To perform successfully in a team requires appropriate behaviour with regard to criticism and conflict but also the willingness to assume responsibility and leadership skills: team-work, often in a multicultural context, is an integral component of most of the teaching modules. In their extra-curricular activities in various student organisations, students also work on the development of their leadership skills. Emotional and intercultural competence are also promoted by the 2+2 Model. Students acquire first-hand experience of studying in another country. Ethical conduct is required of all those involved in the IMX programme – students, staff, and teachers.

These objectives described above are also reflected in the “Learning Outcomes” in the Curriculum & Syllabus Handbook for the four areas of competence: professional, methodical, social, and personal.

A unique feature of the IMX study programme compared to other programmes within and outside ESB Business School are the wide-ranging student activities and the social commitment of students. By taking particular social, cultural, or political commitment of applicants into account in the admissions process, the programme specially targets people who are likely to become actively involved during their studies. This “democratic citizenship” is actively promoted by the IMX programme and by ESB Business School as a whole. Many of these activities are supported by professors and other members of staff. VIMA, which was established and developed by this study programme many years ago, values the commitment of the students and also supports it financially.

In view of the fact that an increasing number of students in the programme are considering the possibility of going on to study in a consecutive master’s programme, the acquisition of skills for academic work is of growing importance. The study programme, which is weighted with 240 ECTS credits, makes graduates eligible to go on to any consecutive master’s degree programme. The aim of achieving competence in academic work is served mostly by working on the graduation thesis for the bachelor’s degree. Students are given systematic guidance in the form of an introduction to academic working methods, close personal support, and tutorials. Obligatory seminars in the 4th and 7th semesters serve as additional preparation of students for work on the bachelor thesis. IMX students who would like to go on to study for a PhD can fulfil this wish through the cooperation programmes between IMX and the partner universities in Dublin, Krakow, and Piacenza. The IMX degree also makes students eligible for participation in the PhD programmes of most international institutions.

The IMX programme meets all the formal and structural requirements of the qualification parameters for German academic degrees. It actually sets higher than average standards for bachelor degree programmes with regard to admission requirements, duration of studies, and qualification objectives.

BSc International Management Double Degree

Duration of studies

8 semesters (4 years), thereof 2 years at ESB Business School and 2 years at partner institution; including two mandatory internships.

2. Competency Goals and Learning Objectives according to AACSB

The International Management Double-Degree programmes (IMX) follow the goal, or „mission“ set by the ESB Business School:

“Within an educational environment that is truly international, we develop leaders who shape global business practice and society responsibly“

Derived from this target, the ESB Business School is committed to achieve defined learning outcomes in the individual programmes; upon this achievement the quality of teaching is measured. The programme goals are rendered in English and will follow the international quality standards of AACSB (Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business) in addition they will be evaluated and assessed.

The defined competency goals and objectives for the ESB programmes include

- language proficiency
- intercultural competence / global perspective
- ethical behaviour
- domain-specific problem-solving competence
- digital skills

The "competency goals" indicate which competencies the graduates have attained (what graduates are), while the "learning objectives" identify the specific skills of graduates (what graduates can do).

Module	A-C-FIN1
Lecturers	Prof. Dr. Sebastian Bunnenberg
Language of instruction	German
Credits (ECTS)	2,5
Total work load	75 h (30 h contact, 45 h self-study)
Contact hours per week	2 SWS
Contents/Indicative syllabus	This course focuses on a framework on corporate investment decisions from a financial perspective. Based on the assumptions competitive and arbitrage-free markets, the time value of money is introduced. Discounting and accruing cash flows allows to determine net present values of streams of cash flows, including for special cases, such as perpetuities and annuities. In this context, effective and nominal interest rates for varying time horizons as well as yield curves and spot rates are treated as well. The course continues with a treatment of investment decision rules using the key figures net present value (NPV) and internal rate of return (IRR) to decide about single investment projects as well as to select from a set of mutually exclusive projects. Next, capital budgeting of risky investments is taught in a case study form. To include risk and return in the decision, the focus shifts to empirical stock markets: Based on total returns of stocks, the relevant statistical concepts are introduced, namely probability distributions, average returns, and volatility. These concepts are the foundation of Portfolio Selection Theory (PST) and the Capital Asset Pricing Model (CAPM), which are extensively treated: For the PST, portfolio of two as well as multiple stocks considered, including short sales and a risk-free asset. For the CAPM, beta as a risk measure is derived and thoroughly discussed through empirical examples and practical issues of its measurement. Finally, the Weighted Average Cost of Capital (WACC) to determine discount rates for general risky investment projects, which allows to calculate their NPV.

Learning outcomes	After successful completion of the module the students should have developed the following competences. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Professional competences: Students are familiar with the fundamentals of international finance and securities markets. A focus is put on trading in securities and on currency risks in business. They also gain a basic understanding of using derivatives for hedging and speculative purposes, especially in the context of market risk.</li> <li>• Methodological competences: Students learn how to analyse securities' and companies' fair value through theoretical models. They apply these valuation techniques to stylized examples and real-word data. They also learn to assess the magnitude and the sources of currency risks in business and how to apply basic procedures to mitigate these risks.</li> <li>• Social competences: During the lecture, students learn how to collaborate to solve complex analytical tasks in a seminar style interactive environment.</li> <li>• Personal competences: Students gain a clear understanding of how neoclassical models use assumptions that may not mirror real life investors' attitudes to ethics, risk, or personal gain.</li> </ul>
Course-specific contributions to AoL competency goals (CG 1 - 6)	CG 4: Students base business, investment, and financing decisions on economic reasoning and analytical insight. CG 5: Students use empirical data of capital markets to gain insights on fundamental issues of financial risks and company valuation.

BSc International Management Double Degree

Contents/Indicative syllabus	The course covers the following topics: theory of international economic relationships, international trade, comparative advantage, international mobility of labor, international inequality, foreign trade policy, international macroeconomic policy, and currency market. This course deals with financial aspects of international business, mainly currency risk in international transaction. After defining and classifying currency risk as a form of market risk, currency forwards and currency future as symmetrical hedging instruments are introduced. This includes their valuation and their usage to secure the future value of single cashflows in foreign currency. This part of the course finishes with a broader perspective on potential pitfalls of symmetric hedging of market risks in business. Next, the course focuses on asymmetric hedging using options. Fundamentals of these derivatives, such as their different variations, their cashflow profiles, and the required terminology are defined. Then, the put-call-parity is defined using arbitrage arguments. This leads to the actual valuation of stock and currency options. Both the binomial tree model and the Black-Scholes-Merton-approach are discussed. This includes the actual valuation formulas, the stock price model, the arbitrage arguments underlying the valuation, and the principle of risk neutral valuation.

Language of instruction	German
Credits (ECTS)	10
Total work load	300 h (120 h contact, 180 h self-study)
Contact hours per week	8 SWS
Examination/ Type of assessment	Two-hour written exam (120 minutes), Group Project
Weighting of Grade within overall programme	10/192
Learning outcomes	After the successful completion of the module the students should have developed the following competences

BSc International Management Double Degree

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li> Professional competences:            Students will gain a comprehensive understanding of both microeconomic and macroeconomic principles, including key concepts like GDP, economic growth, inflation, and the interactions between households and firms in markets. They will learn to evaluate economic situations using both microeconomic and macroeconomic models, appreciating the role of the state, the impact of fiscal and monetary policy, and the importance of spill-over effects between different markets.         </li> <li> Methodological competences:            Students will learn to apply mathematical calculus, graphical methods, and economic reasoning to analyze and understand both microeconomic and macroeconomic models, such as individual optimization, market structures, the IS-LM model, and the Phillips curve. They will develop the skills to determine market outcomes, assess the effects of policy changes, and evaluate welfare consequences using tools like Pareto efficiency and consumer and producer rent.         </li> <li> Social competences:            Students will enhance their ability to work on economic problems in international groups, presenting their results and engaging in discussions with peers and professors. They will develop the skills to reflect on and discuss both microeconomic and macroeconomic issues, contributing effectively in a collaborative learning environment.         </li> <li> Personal competences:            Students will learn to handle abstract economic models and appreciate the mix of intuitive reasoning and formal rigor required to work with economic theory. They will develop resilience in dealing with complex and sometimes frustrating concepts, and understand the significance of assumptions in determining the outcomes of economic models.         </li> </ul>
Course-specific contributions to AoL competency goals (CG 1 - 6)	CG 3: The integration of microeconomics and macroeconomics content into the curriculum introduces students to the foundational principles governing individual and collective economic behavior. By understanding the role and interaction of different economic agents and the framework set by the state, students gain insights into the ethical implications of economic decisions. This knowledge helps them appreciate the ethical considerations in business decisions, policy-making, and market interactions, thereby developing their capacity to evaluate and respond to ethical dilemmas in economic contexts. CG 4: The learning goals are designed to equip students with the necessary tools to address complex economic problems. By mastering key concepts and models from both microeconomics and macroeconomics, students learn to apply theoretical knowledge to practical scenarios. This dual focus ensures that students can tackle program-specific challenges, such as analyzing market outcomes, assessing policy impacts, and solving real-world economic issues with a comprehensive and well-rounded approach.

Additionally, the seminar promotes a curious and inquisitive mindset, encouraging students to explore and expand their knowledge of empirical economics.                 </li> </ul>
Course-specific contributions to AoL competency goals (CG 1 - 6)	CG3: The course addresses ethical considerations in empirical economics, focusing on the integrity of data analysis and the societal impacts of economic research. Discussions highlight the ethical use of data and the implications of economic policies on various social groups. CG4: Students engage in real-world economic issues within labor, education, and public economics. Through group work and discussions, they apply empirical methods to solve practical problems, interpret data, and develop evidence-based solutions. CG5: Students develop functional digital skills by using the statistical software R for data analysis. They gain practical experience in manipulating and analyzing data sets, preparing them for data-driven roles. CG6: Methodological digital skills are taught through the principles of statistical and econometric methods. Students learn to design and implement quantitative research, interpret results from statistical software, and evaluate methodologies used in scientific articles.

BSc International Management Double Degree

Contents/Indicative syllabus	The course "Empirical Economics" offers a comprehensive learning experience. The course focuses on applying empirical methods and economic models to explore questions related to education and human capital. By studying these methods and their practical application in the research field of "Economics of Education," students will develop a strong understanding of empirical economics. Throughout the seminar, students will delve into various empirical methods and economic models commonly used in modern economic research. They will learn to interpret economic data, distinguish between correlation and causation, critically evaluate cause-and-effect statements, and analyze data using the statistical software R. Students will also develop the skills to read and comprehend scientific articles that employ quantitative empirical methods. In the seminar, students will engage in group work and round table discussions to explore recent journal articles. These discussions will provide insights into how empirical methods are applied in contemporary economic research, with a particular focus on labor economics, economics of education, and public economics. By examining real-world studies, students will gain a deeper understanding of how empirical economics contributes to solving complex economic questions. The seminar will also involve practical data work, where students will apply their knowledge of empirical methods and use R to solve small empirical exercises. This hands-on experience will give students valuable exposure to working with data and applying empirical techniques to analyze economic phenomena. By the end of the seminar, students will have acquired a comprehensive set of skills and knowledge in empirical economics. They will be able to interpret economic relationships, assess causality, critically analyze research findings, and conduct small data analysis examples using empirical methods and statistical software.
